Home Health Aide (HHA) Program

Home Health Aide Program

At the Chuck Shaw Technical Education Center, the student is introduced to the concept of patient management in the home, which includes physical comfort and safety, nutrition, and legal and ethical responsibilities.

Purpose of Home Care

One of the most important reasons for offering health care in the home is that most people who are ill or disabled feel more comfortable at home. Health care in familiar surroundings improves mental and physical well-being. It has proven to be a major factor in the healing process.

What Do Home Health Aides Do?

Home Health Aides (HHA) help the disabled and those with chronic illnesses perform activities of daily living, inside and outside of the home. They often care for older adults who need assistance and are the "foot soldiers" of any team that provides direct personal care. On a daily basis, they are always there and ready to respond to the needs of their clients.
